know if those calls were based on skill or luck. I certainly wouldn't want to sling around $5 billion dollars of client assets based on my gut instincts.

The takeaway for investors is the same: If you are going to put capital at risk, make sure you know why. Understand what you want to get out of markets.

And always, think for yourself.

Up next, we meet the greatest-selling personal finance author in history. For sure, the things he says are what we want to hear, and he has been mostly right about many of them, right?

Right?

Oh, dear…

---

43 Michael Lewis, The Big Short: Inside the Doomsday Machine (W.W. Norton & Company, 2010).

44 Jeremy Salvucci, "Michael Burry's net worth: How the 'Big Short' investor got rich," TheStreet.com (April 2, 2024).

45 Adam Khoo, Founder and Chairman of Piranha Profits, a Singapore based trading school. He describes himself as a professional investor and trader. adam-khoo.com.

46 @adamkhootrader, twitter.com/adamkhootrader/status/1691397274524631040 (August 15, 2023).

47 Joe Keohane, "That guy who called the big one? Don't listen to him," Boston Globe (January 9, 2011).

48 Barry Ritholtz, "Maybe the Coronavirus Didn't End the Bull Market," Bloomberg (April 1, 2020).