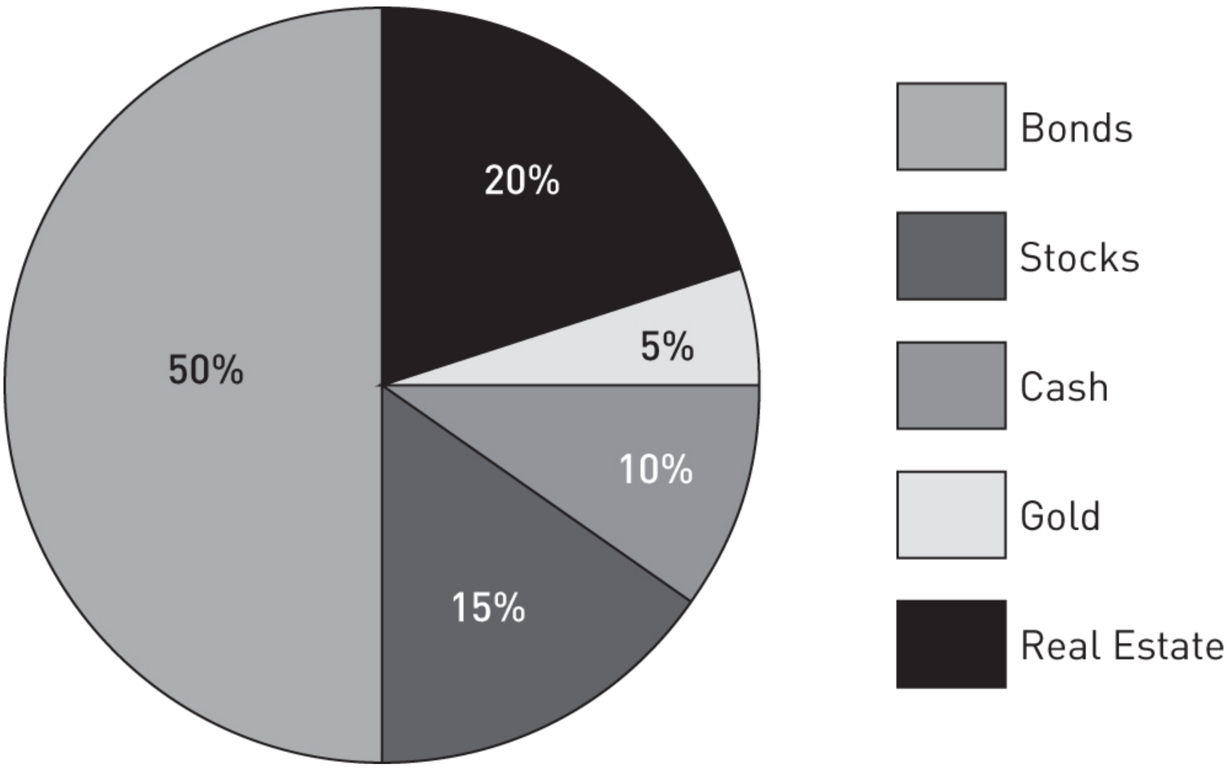
stability. Every ninety days or so, I buy or sell my gold to keep its share of the portfolio at 5 percent.

Kevin O'Leary's Personal Investment Portfolio



*Bonds are tricky. Bottom line is you have to own the right bonds at the right time. These days, I don't own sovereign debt or government bonds because their interest rates are at all-time lows. Governments are proving over and over that they have a difficult time running things. Not so with corporations (which is why capitalism works!). In my portfolio, you'll find only bonds comprising corporate debt—those with an average duration of less than five years. However, when it comes to buying bonds, I strongly advise you to find a good financial advisor to help you.

Money Mistake: You Invest the Same Way All Through Life

THE FIX: MATCH YOUR INVESTMENT RATIO TO YOUR AGE

Here is a simple way to keep an eye on your investments and make simple adjustments to it as you age. To explain this model, let's keep the numbers and ratios simple. Let's say you start investing when