explaining this is because some investors are still stuck in the 2008 mindset of ‘BMV is everything’. Today, I don't care if it’s BMV or not, all I care about is my rent because that is what will give me my high Return on .Investment (ROI) and that is what will bring me my passive income

Don’t be an idiot

I had a phone call in May 2016 from Tanya, an estate agent from whom I had bought a few houses the year before. Tanya sounded frustrated but pleased I had answered the call. She explained that there was this ‘professional investor’, let’s call him Steve. Steve had viewed and placed offers on 200 properties, all with agents and all in Wolverhampton. Every offer had been 20 per cent below the asking price and every single offer had been rejected. She asked me if I could have a word with Steve as he was upsetting hundreds of vendors and killing his reputation with her branch and many other estate agents. I told Tanya to ask Steve to attend my Property Investors Crash Course. I’m running my next course and guess !who turns up? Steve

,I welcomed him and he told me with a firm voice

I have now found my perfect deal which is 20 per cent BMV, but I thought“ ”.I would come anyway just to see what it’s all about

.I smiled and told him I was glad he had made the effort to come down

Two hours into the programme, Steve realised that his ‘perfect property’ was actually a terrible investment and he was ready to withdraw from his offer. Four hours into the programme Steve worked out that he could actually buy two properties with his deposit money. Eight hours into the programme Steve had found these two properties and was ready to buy. Within three months Steve had the keys to two new houses that now make
