

they are “good enough.” We’ll cover this challenge in detail in Part II of this book, but for now, just realize that no amount of money can ever make you good enough. Money can’t make you something you already are. Again, as with fear, the “always having to prove yourself” issue becomes your habitual way of living. You don’t even recognize it’s running you. You call yourself a high achiever, a hard driver, determined, and all these traits are fine. The only question is why? What is the root engine that drives all this?

For people who are driven to prove they are good enough, no amount of money can ease the pain
