

finger across your neck, as a trigger to remind yourself that you are slitting your financial throat. Once again, even though this gesture may seem a little crude to do to yourself, it's no more crude than what you're doing to yourself by blaming, justifying, or complaining, and it will eventually work to alleviate these destructive habits.

2. Do a “debrief.” At the end of each day, write down one thing that went well and one thing that didn't. Then write the answer to the following question: “How did I create each of these situations?” If others were involved, ask yourself, “What was my part in
