

income between someone who has ten people in his or her down-line and someone who has ten thousand people? I would think so!

Near the beginning of this book, I mentioned that I owned a chain of retail fitness stores. From the moment I even considered going into this business, my intention was to have one hundred successful stores and affect tens of thousands of people. My competitor, on the other hand, who started six months after me, had the intention of owning one successful store. In the end, she earned a decent living. I got rich!

How do you want to live your life? How do you want to play the
