

many people feel unworthy or undeserving. This syndrome runs rampant in our society. I would guess that over 90 percent of individuals have feelings of not being good enough running through their veins.

Where does this low self-esteem come from? The usual—our conditioning. For most of us it comes from hearing twenty nos for every yes, ten “You’re doing it wrong”s for every “You’re doing it right,” and five “You’re stupid”s for every “You’re awesome.”

Even if our parents or guardians were incredibly supportive, many of us end up with feelings of not being able to continually measure up to
