

their accolades and expectations. So once again, we're not good enough.

In addition, most of us grew up with the element of punishment in our lives. This unwritten rule simply states that if you do something wrong, you will or should be punished. Some of us were punished by our parents, some by our teachers...and some of us in certain religious circles were threatened with the mother of all punishments, not getting into heaven.

Of course, now that we're adults, all this is over. Right? Wrong! For most people, the conditioning of punishment is so ingrained that, because there's no