

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Writing a book appears to be an individual project, but the reality is that if you want it to be read by thousands or hopefully millions of people, it takes an entire team. I'd first like to thank my wife, Rochelle, my daughter, Madison, and my son, Jesse. Thank you for allowing me the space to do what I came here to do. I'd also like to thank my parents, Sam and Sara, as well as my sister, Mary, and brother-in-law, Harvey, for your unending love and support. Next, a huge thank you to Gail Balsillie, Michelle Burr, Shelley Wenus, Robert and Roxanne Riopel, Donna Fox, A. Cage, Jeff Fagin, Corey Kouwenberg, Kris Ebbeson, and the entire team at Peak Potentials Training for all your hard work and dedication to making a positive contribution to people's lives as well as making Peak Potentials one of the fastest growing personal development companies in the world.

Thank you to my brilliant book agent, Bonnie Solow, for your ongoing assistance, encouragement, and for leading me through the ins and outs of the book business. Another big thank-you goes to the team at HarperBusiness: publisher Steve Hanselman, who had the vision for this project and put so much time and energy into it; my wonderful editor, Herb Schaffner; marketing director Keith Pfeffer; and publicity director Larry Hughes. A special thanks goes to my colleagues Jack Canfield, Robert G. Allen, and Mark Victor Hansen for your friendship and continued support from the beginning.

Finally, I am deeply grateful to all of the Peak Potentials seminar attendees, support staff, and joint venture partners. Without you, there would be no life-changing seminars.
