

Forward fill is often preferred for time series data because it only uses information that would have been available at that point in time.

•

Interpolation works well for truly intermittent missing values but can create unrealistic smoothing.

•

Dropping missing values is sometimes necessary but can create discontinuities in your time series.