

Traders can use this decomposition to develop strategies targeting specific components. For example, you might design a long-term strategy based on the trend component and a separate short-term strategy exploiting seasonal patterns.