

In the next chapter, we'll set up your Python environment and begin building the technical foundation you'll need for algorithmic trading. Remember, every expert trader and programmer started as a beginner. With persistence and the right tools, you're taking the first steps on a journey that could transform your approach to the markets.