

```

7.     start_date (str): Start date in 'YYYY-MM-DD' format
8.     end_date (str): End date in 'YYYY-MM-DD' format
9.     train_size (int): Number of calendar days in each training period
10.    test_size (int): Number of calendar days in each testing period
11.
12.    Returns:
13.    pd.DataFrame: Results of each walk-forward test period
14.    """
15.    # Convert string dates to datetime
16.    start = pd.to_datetime(start_date)
17.    end = pd.to_datetime(end_date)
18.
19.    # Prepare full data
20.    full_data = prepare_backtest_data(ticker, start_date, end_date)
21.
22.    # Initialize results
23.    walk_forward_results = []
24.
25.    # Define parameter grid for optimization
26.    param_grid = {
27.        'short_ma': [5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30],
28.        'long_ma': [50, 75, 100, 125, 150, 200]
29.    }
30.
31.    # Create walk-forward periods
32.    current_start = start
33.    while current_start < end:
34.        # Define train and test end dates
35.        train_end = current_start + pd.Timedelta(days=train_size)
36.        test_end = min(train_end + pd.Timedelta(days=test_size), end)
37.
38.        # Skip if we don't have enough data for a full test period
39.        if test_end <= train_end:
40.            break
41.
42.        print(f"\nTraining period: {current_start.date()} to {train_end.date()}")
43.        print(f"Testing period: {train_end.date()} to {test_end.date()}")
44.

```