

Chapter 5: Data Structures

Organizing Financial Data: The Building Blocks of Trading Intelligence

On a quiet Sunday afternoon in September 2008, executives at Lehman Brothers frantically tried to save their 158-year-old investment bank from collapse. As the hours ticked by, teams of bankers and analysts worked desperately to make sense of Lehman's complex portfolio of assets and liabilities.