

in the WhatsApp group had gone crazy following my posts, and they also congratulated me.

But I was not happy.

The reason is quite simple. The put options I had bought made the high around 155, and it closed at 151.

So, if I had the mindset to hold all my short positions until the close, I would have made 3X profits on that day on my total position.

I am not being "greedy" here. I started closing positions because I could not hold the profits, and every increase in MTM (Mark to Market) triggered a lot of emotions in my mind.

Previously, I had read quotes like - "Money is made by sitting, not trading," or "It was never my thinking that made the big money for me, it always was sitting".

But on that day, I realized the importance of these statements in practice.

To become a successful trader, one should know how to ride the profits!

Even though I made a career best profits on that day, I was upset to the core. Hence, I decided to take up the Vipassana meditation program. Because I wanted to improve my psychology related to trading.

Out of all the intraday trading-related topics, trading psychology gets the least nod of acknowledgment in the trading community. But it is one of the most crucial aspects of trading success.

Suppose I give you $1000 and request you to hand it over to one of my friends who is staying in your city. You will be able to do this without many emotions.

But what if I give you 1 million instead of 1000? Many emotions pop up in your mind, and you may not agree to deliver it, right?

In the same manner, traders get many emotions when they bet their money for trades.
