

to trade all the patterns, in all the scrips, and all the trading days.

Do you know why Usain Bolt runs only in the 100m and 200m sprints? Being the fastest athlete in the world, why will he not choose to run in the other categories such as 400m, 800m, 1500m, 5K, 10K, and other marathon events?

It is because he wants to channelize his focus and energy in one direction. Similarly, if a trader commits to one scrip or one trading pattern, he will take the maximum advantage of it and easily make money in day trading. If you can understand the lesson from this example, any trader will realize the importance of one pattern or sticking to one script.

Volume Shockers

Volume is nothing but the total number of shares bought and sold during any trading interval. It is crucial as it gives a clue about stocks that are in demand.

For example, ABC is a listed company in the stock market. One day it receives a big project from a new client, bringing enormous profits to the company. A few people are aware of this information (company key people, middlemen, investors, etc.), and what do they do? They buy many shares on the next trading day itself, right? So, this activity will result in volume spikes on a daily chart, and if you can combine it with your trading system, you can get beautiful results in trading.