

BULLISH HAMMER PATTERN

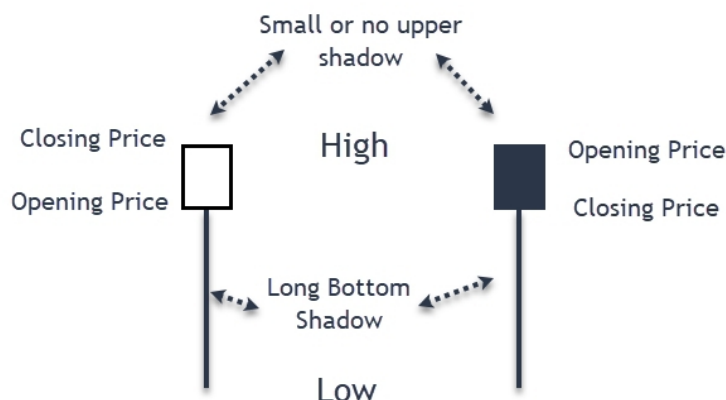

Image 4.1 – Bullish Hammer Pattern

The above image shows the two types of hammer patterns. The common logic is that it will have a small body and a big wick. The body can be either bullish (if the close is above the open) or bearish (if the close is a little below open), but what matters the most is the big buying wick in both cases. It indicates the presence of strong buyers in the candle.
