

Image 4.2 – Bullish Harami Pattern

The above image shows how the bullish harami pattern looks. It consists of two candles – a mother candle (bearish candle) and a child candle (bullish candle).

Bullish Harami occurs in the downswing, indicating the action of serious buyers in the second candle. So, we can expect some bounce from here.

I have noticed that the combination of the above two patterns frequently occurs in intraday trading near IB low, previous day low, and swing low (in 15-min chart). Most of the time, the price took strong support and bounced back.

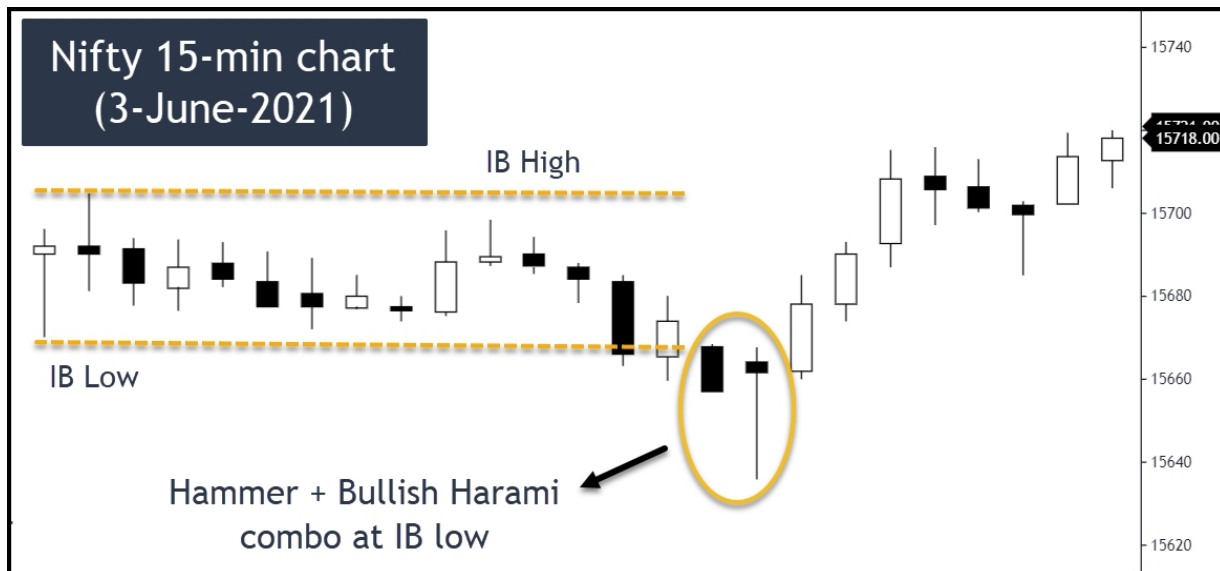

Image 4.3 – Hammer and Bullish Harami Combo Pattern in Nifty

The above chart is a 15-min chart of Nifty on 3-June-2021. The price displayed a combination of Hammer and bullish harami (2nd candle is a hammer and ignoring the long wick, both the candles represent bullish harami) precisely at IB low and price reversed from that point.