

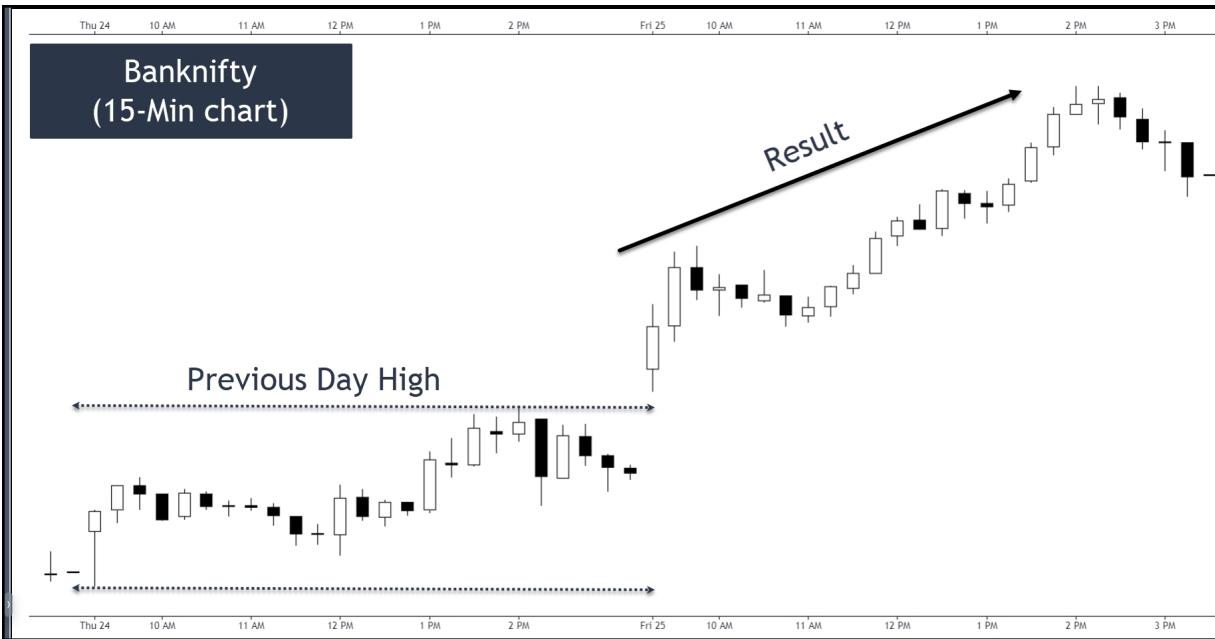

Image 5.7 – Imbalanced Open Result

The result of the imbalanced open is evident as the price moved swiftly to the upside, and it also closed near day's high.

Suppose a trader takes a trade after seeing the imbalanced open and the price acceptance above PDH. In this case, there is a high probability that he makes good profits most of the time (entry above the high of the candle, keeping a stop-loss below the low of the candle).

Hence, this system aims to capture only long trades above PDH that have a high probability of a swift move to the upside.
