

Your child could be holding anything from a box of Smarties to a golden retriever puppy.

It doesn't matter what they want, it's . . . relentless.

Well, in this chapter we're going to tackle one of the biggest parental pain points: pester power!

The definition of pester power (according to Wikipedia) is 'the tendency of children, who are bombarded with marketers' messages, to unrelentingly request advertised items'.

This week we're going to reverse the advertising brainwashing that's bombarding your kids.

How?

By going on a Family Treasure Hunt.

The second challenge of the Barefoot Ten is to 'buy and sell something second-hand' and that's exactly what they're going to do in this chapter.

See, the average family has $5400 worth of trash laying around (according to research by Gumtree, though I guess they would say that), and you're going to turn some of that into treasure.

Along the way you'll convince your kids that you don't have an endless supply of money.

(No, really.)

And I'll tell you exactly what to say when your kids ask: 'Are we rich?' or 'How much money do you earn?'

Plus, I'm going to introduce you to a new game I dreamed up called 'Flogglebox' that will change the way your family watches TV forever.

Let's get to it.

Froot Loops and Looney Tunes