

Seriously, I meet 30-year-olds who have no framework for making good financial decisions. They never saw it happen when they were growing up, and they don't know what it looks like today. Maybe their parents thought they were protecting them, but in reality they were hurting them.

Not you. Not your kids.

Of course, your kids are still going to pester you for some things. (It's in their job description.)

However, with this Money Meal (and the ones you've done over the past few weeks) you're beginning to break the brainwashing.

Flogglebox will teach your kids to be sceptical about the media (and they should be!).

And there's nothing like a bit of second-hand 'trash and treasure' to change the way they think about stuff.

Besides, if they really, really want something—they can buy it out of their own jam jars! And if they buy something they end up regretting, that's another valuable lesson right there.

Next up, we're going to get the kids in the kitchen to host a Money Meal that you're going to love.