

‘You’re supposed to be the adult! The parent! The one in control!’ she thunders.

All very good points.

And that is also why I have outsourced the actual cooking part of this chapter to a woman who would never (intentionally) let her kids overdose on sugar: my mum.

I’ll also be adding my own recipe to the mix—the one that won over Liz on our first date.

RECIPES

Scott’s Famous Pasta

Serves 4

frozen home-brand garlic bread in tin foil (banned in my house since Liz and I got married)
250 g of free-range chicken breast, diced
1 tub of pesto sauce (for flavour)
4 decent-sized mushrooms (I like mushrooms)
1 spring onion, chopped (for colour)
1 tub of semi-dried tomatoes (a throwback to my deli boy days)
1 tub of olives (and again)
half a packet of dried pasta (the spaghetti you’ve had in the cupboard since 1992 is perfect)
