

Parmesan cheese (cheese is the ultimate garnish; however, Liz now limits my intake)

Method

Fill a large pot with water and put it on the stove. Turn the oven on and throw in the frozen garlic bread.

Cut the chicken into pieces the size of half your little finger (careful!). Then toss the chicken into a frying pan with a little olive oil, and cook until brown. Add the pesto sauce.

Cut the mushrooms into chunks and throw them into the frying pan. Same with the spring onion, semi-dried tomatoes and olives.

Shoot! You're so busy prancing around like Matt Preston you forgot the pot of boiling water, didn't you, you drongo! So turn the stove down, clean up the mess and then add the pasta. After 5 minutes, scoop a bit of the pasta from the pot. When it's done say something pompous, like 'al dente'.

Strain the pasta, add it to the stuff in the frying pan, and mix it around a bit. Serve with plenty of parmesan.

(Three hours later your smoke alarm will remind you that you still have garlic bread in the oven.)
