

The ultimate family legends

We all have ‘stories’ we tell ourselves about what sort of people we are:

We’re hard workers. We don’t waste money. We barrack for Collingwood (only joking).

Most of the time these are unspoken . . . and our kids pick up on them subconsciously. Yet you can also choose to purposefully create these stories.

So this Money Meal, that’s what you’re going to start doing.

Depending on your kids’ ages, you’re going to pick one of the three options for ‘breaking the brat’, and do it as a family.

Yes, you’ll get to check off the fourth challenge from the Barefoot Ten. But more importantly, you’ll be creating a new story: ‘In our family, we do kind things.’

And I guarantee you the effects will stick with your child for a long time.

Money Meal ‘shopping list’

- Your kids’ Give Jars
- Food from your pantry
- Make a call to your local council, aged-care home, or Foodbank and ask about volunteering options.

BAREFOOT MONEY MEAL

THE BRAT BUSTER

Put your kids’ Give Jars on the table. Then explain the problem: one in five kids in their class turns up hungry.
