

they see on the petrol boards. However, in time this will be a sure-fire winner . . . and if you have tweens, you can put it into place right away.

After all, it works for you, because you score cheap petrol.

And it works for the kids, because they'll understand that prices are constantly changing, and that the way to save money is by buying up when prices are low. And it trains them to always be on the lookout for lower prices. Plus it's fun!

The rules are simple: whoever can find the cheapest petrol scores something yummy* when you fill up.

 Subject to Mum's discretion.*

Teens: The Lazy $100 Challenge

Okay, so we've done lights and petrol. Now let's set a spark to the flame.

The guts of this chapter, and this Barefoot Ten challenge, is for your teen to . . . 'save you at least $100 on your household bills by negotiating a better deal'.

Here's how we're going to do it. You're going to be lazy each time you get any of the following bills:

- electricity
- gas
- phone and internet
- car and home insurance.

How? You're simply going to hand it to your teen, and challenge them to negotiate you a better deal.

And that's it! Job done! Grab a beer!

Yeah, nah.