

Everyone pitches in and does the dishes.

You've got the power!

Alright!

Over the course of just one Money Meal, you've given your kids the chance to build up their confidence—with some quick, easy and fun wins.

Your little ones will begin to understand that saving is important . . . and that everyone has a job to do.

Your teens will internalise the message that they are capable of taking real financial responsibility—and that you trust them with a part of your finances.

And, as a kicker, you scored yourself some sweet discounts on electricity, fuel and other bills—without having to lift a finger!

Yet in order to make sure your work in this chapter lasts a lifetime . . . we're going to go even further in the next Money Meal, and take a blade to the biggest threat to your kids' financial confidence.

Yes, it's time to give your kids some plastic surgery.
