

BAREFOOT MONEY MEAL

WILL IT BLEND?

Put the blender in the centre of the table (or substitute some scissors). Say nothing . . . let the anticipation build.

ENTRÉE:

Take out your credit card statement, and explain to your kids how credit works—whether it's credit cards, payday loans or store credit. (See page for a dummy statement.)

MAIN COURSE:

Grab your credit card (or statement) and tell your kids:

‘In our family, from this day on, we don’t do credit cards. Never, ever again.’

And then blend that sucker up right at the dinner table. (If you don’t have a blender, use scissors, but be vigorous in your cutting—then create a credit card collage by sticking the pieces to the fridge as a trophy.)

As your kids watch the cards disintegrate before their very eyes, say: ‘In our family, we save up—and we pay for things with cash!’
