

Woolworths

Barefoot goes back to his roots and slices the strasburg with Woolies' Chief People Officer, Caryn Katsikogianis

Stats: 995 stores, 150 000 staff, 30 000 new hires each year, average age 32, average time with company 6+ years

Minimum hours per week: 'One to three shifts per week on average'

How to apply: Walk in, or go online: wowcareers.com.au/page/Careers/Supermarkets/

Caryn started in retail as a 15-year-old, so she knows what it's like on your teen's first day at work. In fact, at Woolies they've set the whole thing up like primary school. Seriously.

Can you give me an inside hack on getting a job at Woolies?

'Everything is online, but we don't discourage walk-ins. You can have a quick conversation with a store manager, and then complete your application with one of the iPads we have set up in store for that purpose.' (Good tip: if you front up and meet a manager, you instantly become a real person rather than an applicant on a screen. As long as you don't have facial tattoos, that's a good thing.)

What's the best time of year to apply?

'We have vacant positions all year round for our stores, but there is definitely an increase in the lead-up to the Christmas shopping period. September is the best time to to apply and register your preferences.'
