

Our game plan

This book is in three parts, and each of them has some of the ‘big things’ that you should get right as a parent.

Part I: First Steps

The first part is about the fundamentals . . . getting your kids to take their first financial steps.

I’ve boiled down the basics of teaching your kids about money to a dead-simple strategy:

Three jam jars . . . to put their pocket money in.

Three jobs . . . so they can earn that pocket money.

Three minutes a week . . . where you’ll ‘lock in’ life-changing money lessons with a simple weekly ritual over dinner.

That’s it.

And yes, it does take you three minutes (I know because I’ve tested it in the field with lots of families).

Your kids will pitch in and help get dinner on the table, work hard and do some jobs. Then they’ll get paid, and make decisions on how to spend, save and give that money.

Part II: The Barefoot Ten

The second part of the book will arm your kids with the life-changing money skills that most people don’t learn till they’re in their 40s (if ever!).
