

Remember, as a parent you can afford to get a lot of things wrong, as long as you get a few big things right.

Well, I've stepped out exactly what these big things are, and I've put them into a simple checklist that you'll be able to go through with your kids.

But let me be clear: this is NOT just a list of topics, or a table of contents, or a lesson plan.

In their bestseller The Power of Moments: Why Certain Experiences Have Extraordinary Impact, authors Chip and Dan Heath researched the building blocks of life-changing moments:

'We spend weekend after weekend together with our kids, but in our memories all those times blend together. What's needed is to rise above the routine. A few minutes can change a life. And the moments that stick with us years later are ones that involve praise, and create an emotionally elevated experience.'

That's why for each of these 'big things', I've created custom-made, real-life experiences that you can do together over the family dinner table.

If you check these experiences off with your kids before they leave home, they're virtually guaranteed to be financially safe and secure for the rest of their lives.

I call them the Barefoot Ten . . .
