

a McNugget into their gob.

Instead, I want you to pull out your phone and call your super fund and ask to be invested in their 'high growth' investment option (100 per cent in shares, no 25 per cent 'safety net' like Warren).

Just by doing this, you'll likely have boosted your end balance by hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In fact, even if you only do this, you are so far ahead of everyone else it's not funny.

Oh, and this is all assuming you can't switch out of your employer's default fund.

But what if you can?

If you can switch super funds . . .

Well, you don't have to eat off the Macca's menu (the default fund).

Instead you can get up and walk across the road where the burgers are better (another super fund).

(And I'll now stop with the burger analogies.)

Why would you bother switching super funds?

Fees.

I've made many, many, many enemies in the world of finance for pointing out what a giant rip-off the super industry is.

The finance industry skims off $31 billion each year from our super funds.

Which means that many boats, mansions, planes and overseas junkets have been financed by compulsory superannuation. From your super.

These financial leeches are happy to get their hands on your money, because they know the average kid doesn't give a guacamole about super fees. And over decades that will rob you of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

If you wondering whether I'm POUNDING THE KEYBOARD right now, you are correct.
