

But to help you out, here are some examples for how it might play out in your household:

Little kids (up to age 7)

With little kids, you're basically just trying to get through the day without them flushing the TV remote down the toilet. In other words, you need to keep things easy. Something like:

1. Clean your room on a Sunday so you can start the week afresh.
2. Put the recycling out (Mummy sure drinks a lot of wine!).
3. Help put the groceries away (Daddy sure eats a lot of chocolate!).

Now, understand you'll probably end up doing these jobs with your kid—and that's okay!

It's not about the job; it's about the physical act of doing the job. (Besides, you're going to clean up their mess regardless, aren't you?)

Tweens and younger teens (age 8 to 14)