

Congratulations! You now have a simple, powerful plan for paying pocket money the right way—in just three minutes a week.

Soon I'm going to show you how to roll it out to your kids with minimal fuss . . . so you can officially get started on the Barefoot Ten, and the fun experiences awaiting you in this book.

But before we do that, we're going to take a leaf out of The Barefoot Investor . . . and kick things off with an extra-special Parents Only Date Night.

There are two reasons I want you to do this:

Firstly, for most of us parenting is a team sport, so you'll want to get your partner up to speed.

While you could get them to read this book, it's easier to take them to their favourite restaurant (no kids!), ply them with booze, and cruise through the Parents Only Date Night 'menu' (see next page).

If you're a single parent, bring along a friend or grandparent, or go by yourself (with me as company).

Secondly, you're going to tailor this book for your family. I've tested the plan you're going to read about on lots of parents, so I know it works—but you know your family best.

Your kids may be old, or young, or have special needs, or be unique in any number of ways. If you flick through the book, you can take a sneak peek at the amazing moments and challenges we're going to create for your kids.

Though I'm sure you'll find some things where you'll say, 'That's not going to work for us . . . We'd actually do it this way.'

That's okay!

On this Date Night you're going to take the building blocks of this plan and tweak it to work long term for your kids.

Don't worry, I've got the entire evening sorted out for you. All you need to do is book the restaurant.
