

Yes we are. It's our new family tradition . . . and I assume you want to be paid every week?

Why are you making me help out with dinner?

Because from now on, that's what our family does for the weekly Money Meal—we all help each other out. You can set the table, help cook, clear the table at the end, or do the dishes. Everyone pitches in.

Do I have to help out with dinner every night of the week, or only for the Money Meal?

(I'll leave that one up to you.)

Not having my phone sucks.

Yes it does. But it'll be over soon—and you'll be richer.

What jobs do I have to do to earn my pocket money?

You only have to do three jobs a week. It's up to you to choose which jobs you want to do (subject to parental final approval). You can change them each week, or month, as you choose.

When do I have to do them?

If you want to get paid, your jobs need to be done before you sit down each week for the Money Meal.

How much will I get paid?

Because you're six you'll get paid $6 a week. For each job you miss, you'll be paid $2 less. And if you do no jobs, you'll get paid nothing. (Or whatever amount you as parents decide, obviously.)

Can I do extra jobs and get paid more?

(I'll leave that up to you.)

What if I'm sick and can't do one or more of my jobs?
