

Well, you only get paid for doing the jobs, so you'll get paid less that week. But you can do extra next week to make it up.

When will I get paid?

You'll get paid at the end of our Money Meal. Mum or Dad will check the Scoreboard on the fridge and make sure you've marked off your jobs, then pay you. We'll start next week.

What are the three jars for?

To divide up your pocket money. Splurge is for day-to-day stuff. Smile is for saving up for things that take a little longer to pay for—that make you smile when you think of them. Give is money you use for helping people. The only rule is that you have to put some money into each jar each week, but how you divide it is up to you.

Do I have to use jam jars?

All pocket money we're paying you has to go into your jam jars. But for older kids you'll also get a wallet or purse for the money when you want to go out and spend it. Next week we'll be setting up a bank account, too.

What can I spend my money on?

Splurge money is up to you. Smile money is your way of saving up for something you really want—and you'll track it on the Barefoot Scoreboard. Give money will be a family project.

You rock!

We've covered a lot of ground.

Seriously, you should be proud of yourself.

Most parents mean well. They start out paying pocket money . . . but it always seems to . . . fizzle out.
