

himself a good job in the radio business, and was making money. He felt sure that stocks were underpriced (the understatement of the year), and so did his broker. But he never made any money, he was so busy buying and selling and buying and selling.

There is another quality essential to investing for yourself: Patience.

For example, he bought some United Fruit at 11 (down from a high of 146) and some Libbey-Owens-Ford at 22, and soon after sold them at 12½ and 24. Then he was switched in and out of Bendix and Union Pacific the same way—making a small profit in each, then bought and sold Electric Auto-Lite and Fairbanks, Morse, and then back into United Fruit and Libbey-Owens-Ford, which by now had each gone up several more points, and so on and so on. The broker made money from all the commissions, but impatient Griseldo almost went broke making a profit—something no man is ever supposed to do.

NO TIME FOR HEARTS AND FLOWERS

There is one other type who should stay away from the investment world and that is the person who is Fraught with Sentiment.

"Oh, I just couldn't bear to part with my Florida Dehydrated Power," she will say with a beseeching look. "It belonged to my great-grand-daddy Atkins. I don't know what I'd do without it, we've had it in the family for so long."

"Sell my Mrs. MacBeth Spot Remover Common? Never!" another will shriek. "It was very good to me for all
