

go to AirTouch, which has done a terrific job winning joint-venture cellular-telephone franchises throughout Europe. Two other cellular investments worth considering are 360 Communications, which is the domestic cellular spinoff from Sprint, and Britain's Vodafone.

If you favor a more focused "special situation" approach, the Canadian telephone giant BCE should benefit when it sells off its substantial investment in Northern Telecom and as Canadian deregulation catches up to the rest of the world. On a per capita basis, the Vancouver metropolitan area has the highest concentration of expatriate Chinese in North America. This could prove to be a great "gateway to China."

Telecommunications is the No. 1 global growth industry for the next decade or more. Consequently, long-term investors will not have to be terribly discriminating to earn pretty good returns in this sector.

GLOBAL EYEBALLS

No American products travel better than filmed entertainment and pre-recorded music. Several years ago, the investor relations people at Time Warner were kind enough to give us a tape of Warner cartoon characters, providing a global geography lesson dubbed in a dozen foreign languages. We've used this tape at our annual client meeting to illustrate the global reach of the American entertainment industry. There is simply no place you can go in the world without American film being a staple of cinematics, cable TV or broadcast entertainment. The same goes for music. Just look at the convergence of the computer, telephone and
