

phone was impracticable and that in any event Western Union owned patents giving it a better claim to the invention. Mr. Depew lived to see Western Union a subsidiary of American Telephone.

No one ever attained a fortune by seeking the advice of others.

The lesson is clear. Let him who would succeed in speculation seek all the facts diligently, for with inadequate or erroneous information even the most intelligent speculator may reach a wrong conclusion; but let him remember that in the end he must decide for himself what and when to buy and to sell.
