

through the regular processes established by the New York Stock Exchange. We trust that occasions for such adjustments will be infrequent. The matter is mentioned here only because where man and equipment are involved, there is always a chance of error.

We believe we have a sound program, but it is not enough to develop and execute a sound program. The people must know about it. That's why we are going to do some advertising.

SECURITY BUSINESS IMPORTANT TO OUR WHOLE PEOPLE

In closing, we'd like to express our unshakable confidence in the future of our country, in the basic soundness of our type of economy—capitalism—and in the essential place that the security business has in that economy. We consider that the security business contributes more than most people realize to the development and the welfare of our whole people. It brings together those who need funds for industrial development and those who have funds to invest. It provides money for businesses to build new factories, buy new machines, finance new production, create and maintain employment.

The security business provides money for government to support public institutions and develop civic projects. It puts savings to work, gives literally millions of people a part-interest in business, and thus contributes to our economic progress.

It is estimated that between six and ten million Americans own bonds, between nine and eleven million own stocks. Fifty million of us own life insurance policies, a large portion of whose assets are invested in securities as a protection to the insured. More than thirteen million of us have savings in mutual savings banks, and twenty-six million have deposits in national and state banks and trust companies,
