OUR JOB IS TO MAKE AMERICAN ECONOMY WORK

Without the security market our whole system would collapse, or be radically altered along the lines of some of the European governments. We don't think we are prejudiced in our opinion that the American system of economy is as good as any yet devised by man—and we mean from the standpoint of the people as a whole, not just the privileged few.

It's our job to make that system work, to continue to improve it along lines already established by the government and by our own voluntary efforts. It's our job to see the other fellow's point of view and to reconcile our interests with his. It's our job to move forward with whatever capacities we may have—moral, mental, financial—to the end that our country may progress and that we ourselves may earn the rewards of intelligent effort, honestly applied.

We think that together we can contribute something worthwhile to our personal and the public welfare.
