

still friends and I will always have gratitude in my heart for both my mentor
.and Simon Zutshi for believing in me

This was in 2008 just before the recession. The strategy was to buy properties at 20 per cent Below Market Value (BMV) and then quickly refinance them to their true value. This resulted in getting the deposit money back and, ultimately, leaving you with a 'No Money Down Deal'
.(more on that later)

Despite not being able to get a mortgage, I began helping my mentor source properties and he agreed that if I was successful, when I turned 18 years of age he would host a mortgage for me, which meant I could get a property of .my own

That year was one of the best years of my life. I quit my career of just three months working in my dad's entertainment company; I had a spiritual experience that led me to plugging into my local church; I learned to drive and bought a car; I attended every property investors programme I could; and networked like a madman. I sourced as many properties as possible and made friends with estate agents in about ten different cities across the UK.

That year, my mentor managed to get five No Money Down Deals while also investing in apartments from the equity pulled from his own home. We !were smashing it

My mentor bought a House of Multiple Occupation (HMO) property close to Bournville, Birmingham. He had employed a builder to do the conversion, costing around £45,000, but the builder ended up charging lots
.of extras and it was quite a difficult time

I began searching for more properties in the Bournville area and would offer 20 per cent BMV on everything I saw until somebody said yes. Three months before my 18th birthday came an opportunity to buy a 3-bed house for £100,000. The value was £120,000 and if I was to use the method I had .been learning, it could be a No Money Down Deal

The condition of the house was good and it had an extra reception room, so potentially it could be a multi-let house. The deal was completed three
