

used to be. I continued to persist and hoped it would blow over and they would see that my heart is good. I arrived at one evening service and one of the elders stood in front of the door. My heart sank and I asked

”?Are you stopping me from coming inside“

,He responded

”.It’s best you leave, sorry“

That’s the last time I have ever been to that church and nearly all of my friends from there have refused to speak to me

After this awful experience of being completely misunderstood and kicked out of the church, I realised that it was not their fault. The people who had opposed me simply had a twisted view of money and were taking it out on me. I have nothing but love for every single person who gave me a hard time and if it were not for them I would not have the strength I have now

It forced me to study economics, scripture and philosophy, but most of all, myself

?Why do I teach

Since then, I have joined another church who accept and embrace me. I have also set up a Christian Business Network where we support Christians to be successful in business practically and emotionally. It has become my mission to release people from the guilt of success and teach all I know to
