

£75 per month is just an example, but this will vary depending on the house
.and the landlord

So this will leave you in profit with an ROI of about 7 per cent. Not only would your house appreciate in value and make you rich, you are also .making a nice passive income stream at the same time

.Let's compare this with the bank

Average house

Total investment: £37,500
Annual profit: £2,700
Return on Investment: 7.2 per cent
Plus: CAPITAL GROWTH

Average bank

Total investment: £37,500
Annual profit: £187.50
Return on Investment: 0.5 per cent
Minus: DEPRECIATION

Please don't forget that this house was one you bought straight from an estate agent with zero thought or strategy and ultimately you would still make very good money from it. There would be some fees attached to buying any property but I hope I have made my point that even buying blind you will be a hundred times better off than putting your money into a