

buying a house I don't care whatsoever what it looks like. I don't care about the driveway, the garden or the neighbour's dog. I don't care that much about where it is and how much it is going for as long as somebody is around to manage it and the rent is high enough to give me a nice return. If you remember nothing else in the chapter remember this – it is all about the !rent

I speak to so many people who are in the process of buying a property
,investment and I ask them

”?That’s great! What are you buying“

,They respond

”.A place in Bristol“

When I ask why Bristol they go on to explain that their daughter is moving to Bristol University and they wanted to kill two birds with one stone.
!Commercially, this is absolutely crazy

Please never try to kill two birds with one stone; please never buy when
.your emotions are involved

In this example they would have been better off buying a good investment house in the right area and then just fund their daughter through Bristol
!University and have money left over at the end of it too

Get with the times

When I started building my portfolio back in 2008, the only thing I was interested in was how Below Market Value (BMV) the deal was. If it was
.20 per cent or more BMV, I would buy it

This was great then because you could refinance it and pull your money out, but today that is much more complicated. Things became more difficult when lenders began requiring you to own the property for at least six months before you could refinance. This meant that the money you had put
