

lease OPTION agreement not OBLIGATION. The original owner, however, cannot change his mind and is obligated to sell at the agreed time and price

First, add value

In order to be successful you must always be adding value. Elbert Einstein says

”Do not try to be a person of success, but rather a person of value“

When we add value, the success will always follow. Money is a certificate showing you have added value to people. With this in mind, how on earth is taking away somebody's house from them without paying a penny, adding value to them

Surely this is taking advantage of people? Why on earth would any landlord agree to you doing this with their property

These questions are good questions, but when you delve a little further you see that this is a win-win situation. Whenever negotiating a deal it is always a good idea to first put yourself in the shoes of the other party

What if the owner of the property has a property that is worth £100,000 but the mortgage is also £100,000. The mortgage payments are £300 per month and they haven't got any tenants. They are struggling to pay the mortgage and want to sell the property. They are dreading the long and expensive process of going through an estate agency and they know that even if they sell it for £100,000 they will not be left with a single penny. This house is a