Use other people's money

Earlier on, we learned how to find deals that generate a minimum ROI of 20 per cent and beyond. Imagine if there were hundreds of people who had tens of thousands of pounds and were willing to wire as much money over .to your bank account as you wanted and could do it today

If you asked for £50,000, within a matter of hours it would be in your bank .account

You could then buy as many properties and HMOs as you wanted as long as you gave the lender a 10 per cent return on their money and you could give .them their investment back whenever you wanted

!Well I have news for you; this pretty much is the case

I have people practically begging me to have their money. They have £100,000 sat in the bank earning them almost zero interest and the concept of earning a fixed 10 per cent is extremely attractive to them. This may surprise you, but I have never asked anybody to borrow money. I have people queuing up to give me their money, but instead of asking them I attract them. There is nothing more unappealing than a desperately broke person asking to borrow money for an investment. This is something that we spend more time on at our training programme, as well as the correct .paperwork to use for any joint venture like this

Let's imagine that you borrowed £30,000 from them and you then bought an HMO that earned you a profit of £8,300 per year. This is very realistic.
