

judgment. And know that the road to pursuing the things you love won't be paved. You'll have to navigate your income, season, and values, which may include delayed gratification at times, but ultimately none of it should feel like deprivation. You're laying down some things so you can pick up the more important things. Whether that be for now or in the future.

In the next section we'll navigate the noes. Why it's so hard to say no, how to say better no's, and how to navigate places where you can say no, but not fully. All in the hopes of helping you journey through the nuances of values-based spending.

Lightning Round

What expenses are most important to you in your current season, and how are you prioritizing them?

Action Step

Complete the 90-day transaction inventory. Go through your transactions and try to note the reason behind each one. Remember, we have a full video walkthrough of the 90-day transaction inventory process at frugalfriendspodcast.com/book.
