

your wedding. It'll also cause fewer fights and headaches, as ten bridesmaids means picking ten dresses everyone likes and looks good in, coordinating ten multiple fittings, and corralling everyone for the pricey photo sessions.

Savings: $5000-plus.

10. Stay married. It's the best way to save money. I have friends who are on their third or fourth marriage. Every time they walk down the aisle, they say they've found "the one," and don't they have the right to be happy? A few years later, life's not happier with the new wife. It's just different. Look, I'm not against love, but if you're getting married three or four times, you might want to consider that you're bad at being married. That's okay. I'm sure you have other talents. There's a direct comparison to entrepreneurs who drive every business they helm into the ground. Maybe they're better off getting a job than running a company.

My wife and I have been through a lot in our twenty-plus years together. There have been ups and downs and some very close calls. But we make it work. Why? For me, it always comes down to this: Linda is the only woman in the world I know, with complete, 100 percent certainty, loves me for exactly who I am. I know this because she married me when I had nothing. That's love.

Savings: Incalculable.
