

probably aren't. Either way, your 90-Day Number is going to give you valuable information about your spending and saving habits. If you've read this far, I'm assuming you want to change. So get out a pen and fill in the blanks below.

Start with your income. If you don't keep pay stubs, go back and look at your bank statements. Add up the column of all incoming money, automatically deposited paychecks, including any money you make on the side—even money the government might not know about. Include it all—the coins rolled and deposited, tax returns, money from cash jobs, returned bottles, eBay sales, lottery wins, baby bonuses, alimony or child support, money borrowed by or paid to you, dividends or interest earned on any investments that you do have. Don't include your assets, just the liquid stuff—the flow, the cash coming in. Write it all down.

MY PERSONAL MONEY PICTURE

90-Day Input

Income/Salary (Net)

Child Support

Alimony

Bonuses/Winnings

Tax Returns/Credits

Interest Earned

Dividends Earned

Employment Insurance
