Every relationship you have is an investment. Take a look at them. How many of those relationships actually “pay off”? How many pay dividends commensurate to the amount of time and effort you put into them? I’m talking about emotional dividends. That’s how you measure the health of each relationship. The ones that don’t pay off tend to get less of your attention over time, to the point where they eventually fade away. And it’s a two-way street. If you don’t give, you don’t get—the dividends of any relationship reflect that. Money works the same way. Disregard it, ignore it, don’t take pains to protect it, and your money will disappear. Conversely, if you do your part in your “money relationships,” money will reciprocate. I promise you.

What’s your part? You are the saver, the spender, and the savvy investor in this relationship. You are the steward of your money. I discussed why it’s important to get a clear snapshot of your 90-Day Number, because it teaches you about your current relationship with money. I also showed you how to break that consumer trance so you can avoid Ghost Money and keep it all real, in your wallet and in savings or accounts. You’ll begin to free up money you already have so you can start investing, as often and as early as possible. It doesn’t matter how much you invest. What matters is that you start—and soon.
